

Food and agriculture systems are not working for the people or the planet:

They contribute One third of the global GHG emissions

They threaten 86% of at-risk species

2 billion people suffer from hunger and obesity-related malnutrition

Farmers and their communities make up 2/3 of those in extreme poverty

We need a just rural transition — ensuring that efforts to transform food systems are inclusive and equitable

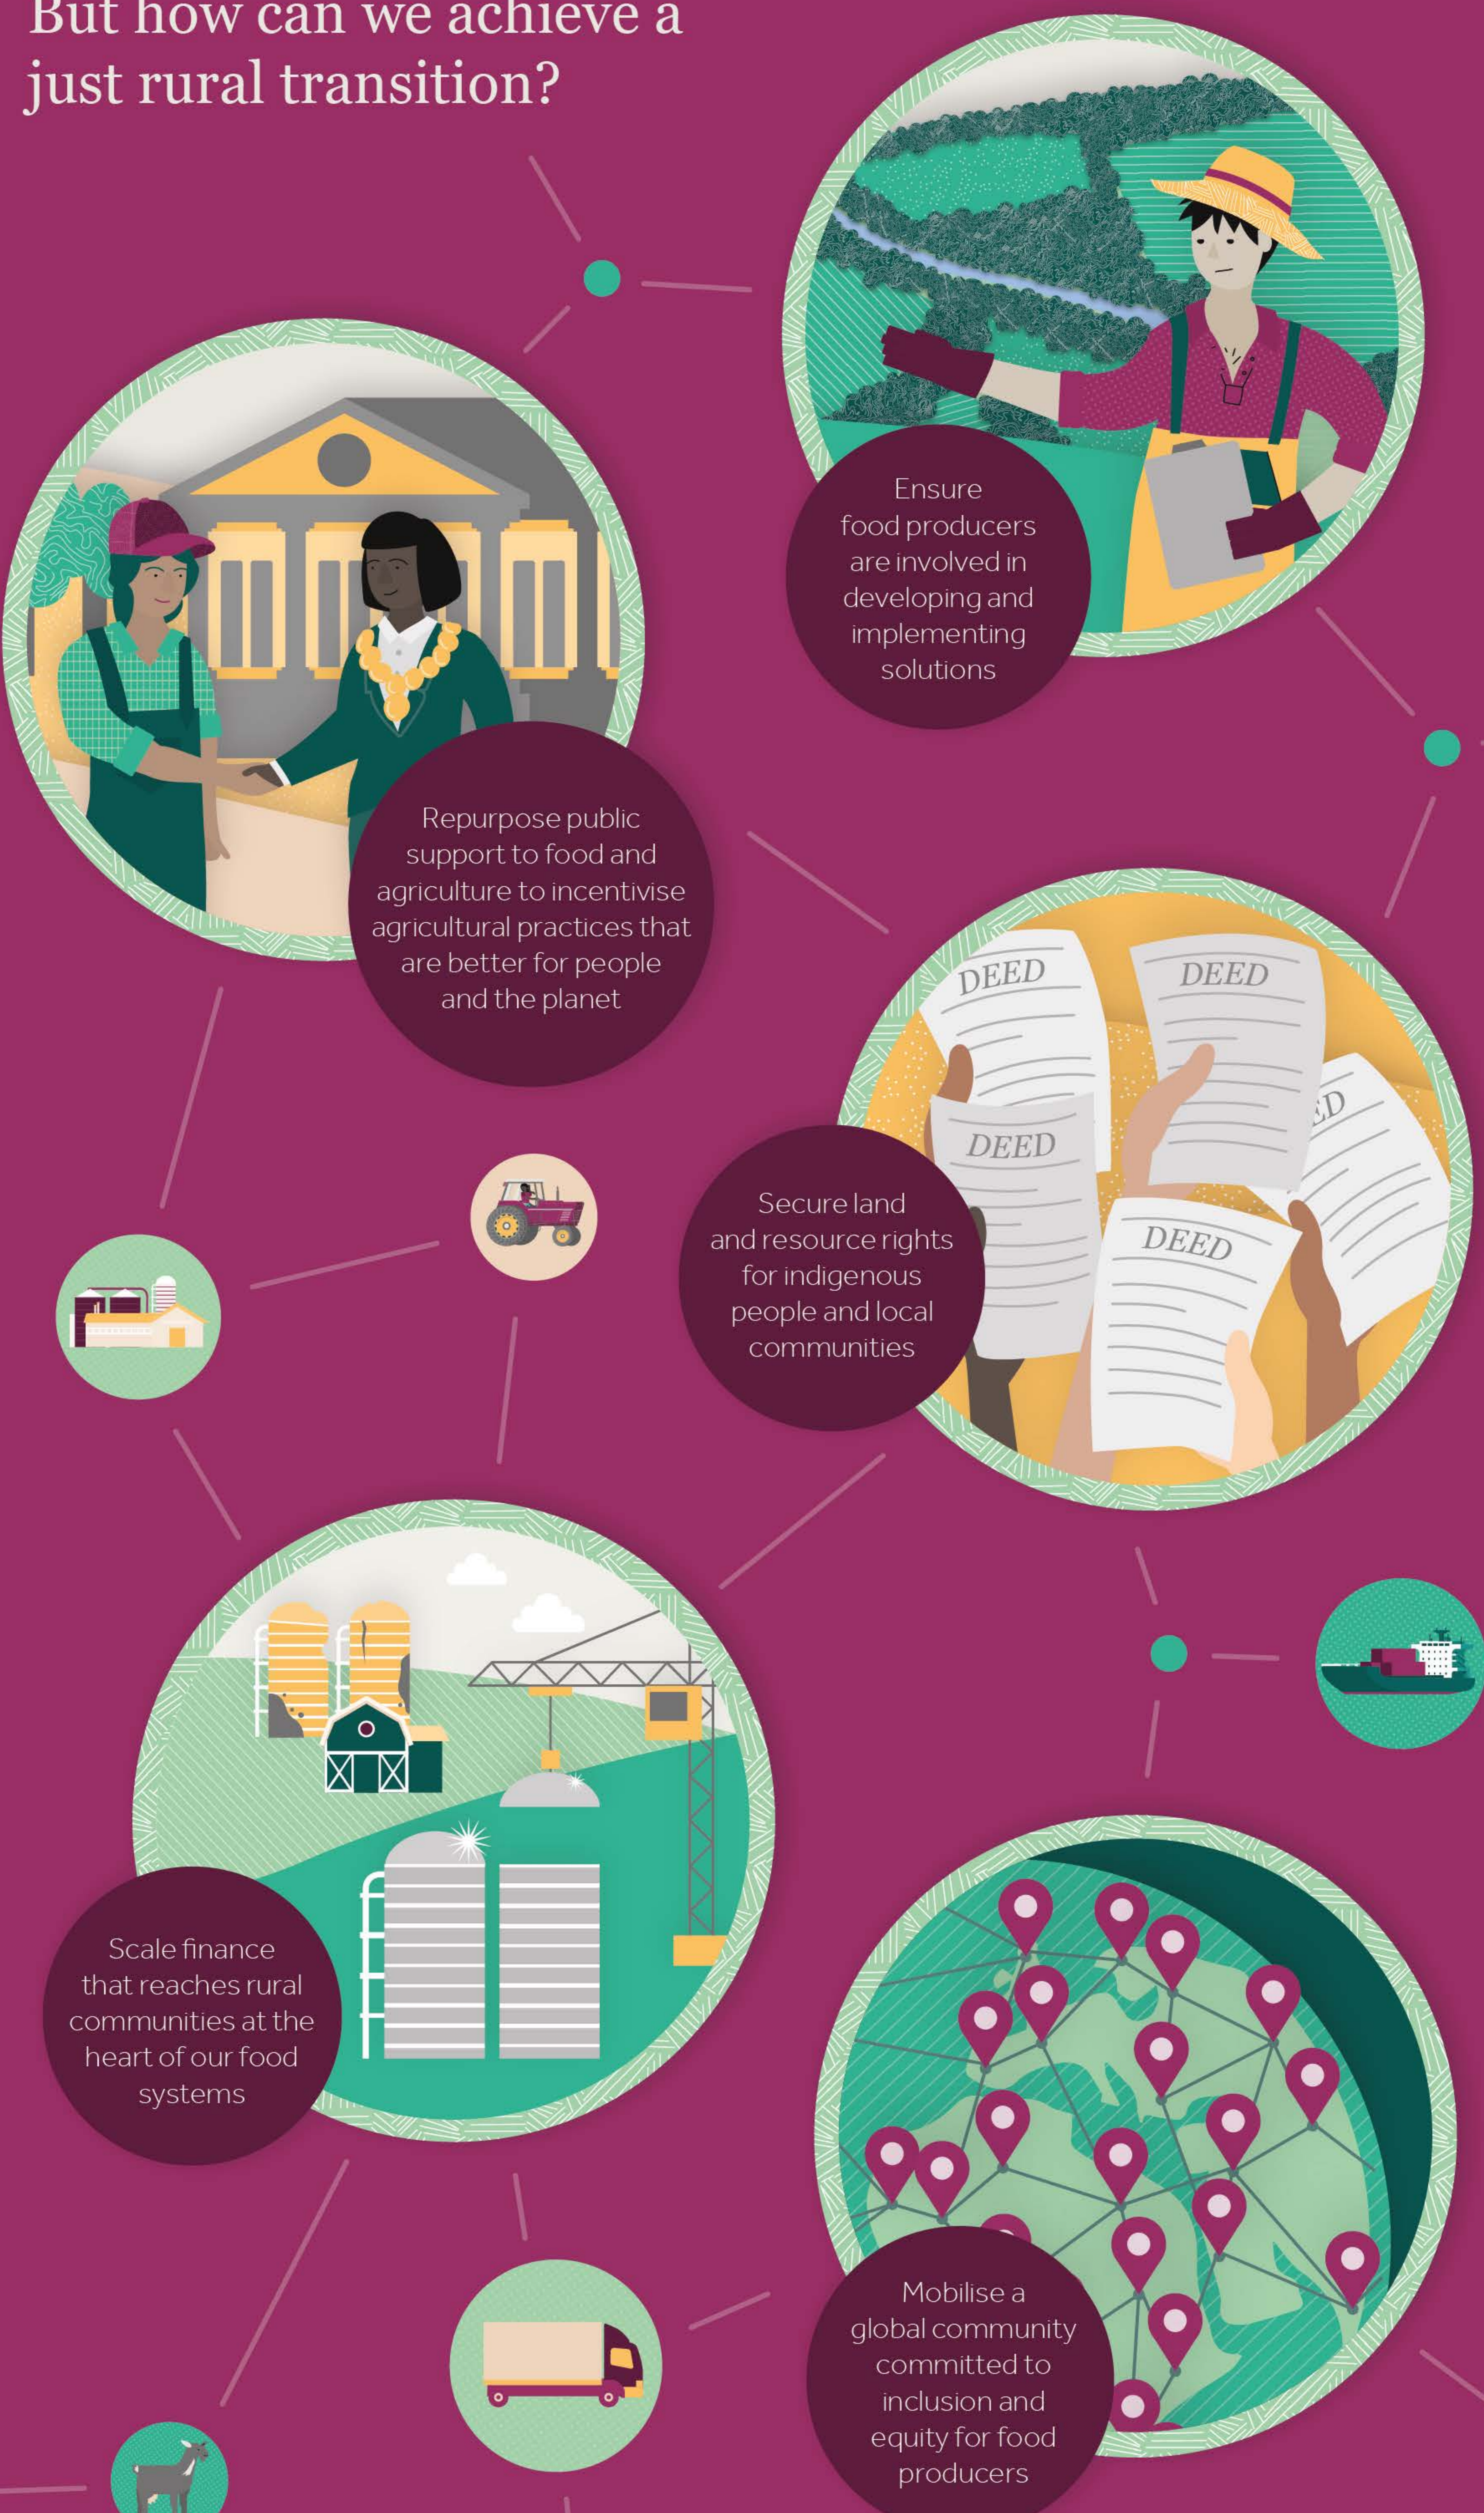

Everyone has a seat at the table
Food producers have a meaningful say in policy and investment decisions that impact them

Outcomes of transition are fair
The transition leads to equitable social, environmental and economic outcomes for food producers

But how can we achieve a just rural transition?
